Message from Chair, CEO and Founder

Reclink began with a network of community service agencies getting together to run sports program for their clients. Today Reclink curates a national network of over 500 community services agencies getting together to co-design and run sports programs across the country, supported by Reclink’s Sports and Recreation Coordinators.

In the intervening 30 years Reclink has shown time and again through personal stories and research how important it is for people to be connected to sport, art, and recreation as a core element of their healing journey. It brings about three things that Reclink always seeks for participants:

1. Improved mental health
2. Improved physical health
3. Social inclusion

This year these three things have been the markers of impact for Reclink’s programs across the country. As states went into and out of lockdown our coordinators were a connection point for many in our community. We provided online physical and mental health and wellbeing programs with up to nine sessions a day of different online activities. We took in donations of sporting goods and gave them to locked down families in need with isolated and bored children who had too much energy to burn. And we made phone calls. We know who is lonely and isolated in our communities, who is vulnerable and needing encouragement so we started phoning. When we could not get out there and play sport, we got on the phone and called, completed welfare checks and just said hi to our Reclink family.

Thanks has to go to our volunteers, including our Board, who have supported and led us through this challenging time. We also thank our member agencies and life members for working alongside us to develop and promote new programs, and our government and funding partners for believing in us enough to let us do things a little differently than usual. I think you will all agree Reclink has continued to deliver excellent partnerships and programs.

We (Peter, Michael, and Dave) are extremely proud of the work of Reclink through this period. As Peter likes to say “Reclink has always talked about bringing people out of isolation... now our conversation has become the national conversation.” Supporting Reclink will ensure no-one is left in isolation. We are grateful for the commitment and work of our staff who go over and above every day, often working in ways that will never be highlighted or acknowledged by others but that make a significant difference in the lives of Reclink people.

Participant Stories

Patrick’s Story

Patrick was in high school when the pokies first came out and he was hooked as soon as he started. He is embarrassed to say that this lasted 10 to 15 years, betting at least half to his entire pay during this time. By his mid-30s he was living a reckless life and $35,000 in debt.

His personal life was an absolute mess. His mental health was at an all-time low. Slowly, he turned things around. He got re-introduced to running. Reclink brings together his running and a healthy, positive approach to sport and adventure with his enjoyment of helping others.

Bec’s Story

Bec had a short-term drug addiction for all the wrong reasons but through the Reclink program she has been off those drugs for two years. Participation in Reclink programs raised her confidence, self-worth, and improved her mental health and fitness.

“I now see the importance physical exercise has on my mental health, thanks to Reclink.”

Bec, Reclink Australia participant

Since becoming involved with Reclink her life has improved and she is much more stable. Bec recently enrolled in a TAFE course and plans to study to become a vet nurse.

Our FLO students currently attend end of term activities supported by Reclink which has made a huge impact on their social skills and self-confidence by trying new activities that otherwise would not be achievable for our young people with various barriers and complex issues. For this reason I would love the opportunity for our students to attend the Explore SA program.
